Health-related problems
Help with medical expenses for sister of student with cerebral palsy	300	1	One of the students the Condor Trust began to support in September 2018 has a sister with cerebral palsy. The mother is unable to work as she has to look after this daughter. The household income is extremely low and unable to encompass anything beyond basic expenditure. In this case, the girl was taken to hospital with pneumonia. We spent $300 to help pay for the medical expenses associated with this incident.
Psychiatric help	200	1	This relates to one of the boys the Condor Trust supports who suddenly began to do badly at school in 2018. In our last report, we detailed $400 which had been spent on 10 sessions with a psychiatrist at a reduced rate of $40 per session to try and alleviate the student's depression. As reported previously, the boy completed secondary school successfully in summer 2018, but continued to have bouts of depression. The current $200 paid for a further five sessions, which appear to have helped to some extent.
Medicine for one of our students	112	1	This is half the costs of medical treatment for one of the girls the Condor Trust supports, who suddenly began to put on weight to an incapacitating degree, such that she could not attend school.

Housing support
Contribution to land purchase	700	10	One of the students the Condor Trust supports, and who is now studying at university in Quito, lives with her mother and eight brothers and sisters. In November 2018, the family were forced to leave the small house they were living in as the area was being redeveloped. This left them homeless. The government offered this family and the other families displaced the possibility to buy plots of land on the outskirts of Quito. Each family had to raise US$2,000 to do this. The mother managed to raise US$1,000 and our student US$300. The Condor Trust donated the remaining US$700, so the family could buy the land. The government subsequently began to help with the provision of a small, basic house on the land.
Educational support
Computer for design course	846	1	One of the students the Condor Trust supports managed to get a place to study design in a tertiary college in Quito, starting in September 2018. The Condor Trust is paying her fees and living costs and also for some necessary equipment. For the second term, the college insisted that each student has his/her own computer with enhanced capabilities, in order for the student to be able to work on advanced designs. We used the Hardship Fund to buy a computer for this student. One of our Condor Trust alumni, who graduated four years ago and now works as a computer programmer in Quito, worked for free on the computer in order to adapt it for use by the student, thereby saving additional costs. Invoice on next page.
