| Emergency Relief due to Covid-19 | | | |
| Support for three Condor families without income – April/May | 600 | 15 | Three of the Condor students live in Catzuqui de Velasco, a small and remote village in the mountains at the edge of Quito. All of the parents lost their jobs when quarantine was imposed, and food became difficult to obtain in the village. This expenditure paid for someone to buy food and other necessities for them in Quito and to drive with these supplies to the village. This was done twice, in April and in May 2020. |
| Support for two Condor families without income – June/July | 400 | 12 | Two families who had managed to survive without work between March and May exhausted their funds and could not find work. We provided each with $100 per month for two months, to cover basic food. |
| Support for one Condor family who contracted the virus | 300 | 5 | In the middle of May, one of the students who the Condor Trust supports and his family (two parents and two siblings) caught corona virus. The family had no financial reserves at all, and no employment. The situation was made more difficult as one of the children is severely physically disabled. The money, added to donations from other sources, has paid for food, medicine and cleaning products. By the beginning of June, all three children had recovered, and the mother was beginning to feel better. The father remained ill for several weeks, but by July had completely recovered. |
| Support for a second Condor family who contracted the virus | 640 | 6 | In July, the father of one of our students contracted Covid-19 and sadly died. All the family was infected, but all have since recovered. As the father was the only source of income at this time, the Condor Trust paid two months rent ($220 x 2) so the family could continue to have a roof over their heads, and also $200 to help with food and medicine. The family has now got together with some relatives and all of them have found a cheaper place to live together. |
| Health support for a student following her father's death | 307 | 1 | Following the death of her father, our student had several fits. The local doctor could not find out what was wrong, so we paid for her to visit a specialist and have a brain scan in August. The total costs were almost US$400, but the Condor Trust paid for the balance not charged here. It turned out that the student has a genetic condition, which had previously not manifested itself. She is now taking regular medication and seems to be fine. |
| Help with house construction | 400 | 6 | One family renting two rooms on the outskirts of Quito could no longer pay rent as they had no income, and the landlord, also without income, was about to throw them out. The father managed to find some unused land, but had no money for building materials. We agreed to make a contribution, if other supporters could be found. Sufficient funds were put together to build a basic house, the whole family helped construct it, and were able to move in during August. |

|--|---------------------|-------------------------|--|
| | Amount Spent (US$) | Number of people helped | Comments |
| Unemployment support | | | |
| Support for one Condor mother for one month | 230 | 4 | In February, the mother of one of the Condor students lost her job as a cleaner and was unable to find another job immediately. We supported her and her family for a month. |
| Educational expenses | | | |
| Help with educational expenses for one of our students | 200 | 1 | In December 2019, one of our students was awarded a Young Leaders Scholarship by the US Embassy in Ecuador. This gave him the chance to go with a group of students to spend a month in Ohio in February 2020. Although all travel and accommodation expenses were paid by the US Embassy, other necessary expenditure (vaccinations, winter clothing, passport, visa etc) was not. This money, together with money raised by the family, contributed to these expenses. |
| Computer repairs and transport | 228 | 15 | When it became clear that the schools were not re-opening in September, it became vital for all our students to have access to a computer at home. Thanks to earlier donations by Fondation Eagle, we were able to re-allocate these computers to various of our students. This involved some repairs (US$88 + US$80) and some transport costs (US$60). |
| Three replacement computers | 1,695 | 12 | Three of the computers we had purchased some years ago, thanks to Fondation Eagle, had had very heavy use and were not working well. A computer specialist (one of our ex-students who now works with computers!) established that they couldn't be repaired at a reasonable cost, so we purchased three new ones. |
